Stephanie Dunn is an accomplished banker with a deep knowledge in funeral service lending. As a commercial banker and founder of a nonprofit in Chicago, Stephanie rose to international fame on Season 10 of NBC's "The Apprentice," making it to the final boardroom before being fired by "The Donald." In 2012, Stephanie founded and managed Live Oak Bank's national funeral lending division, where she personally generated more than $100 million annually in funeral loans. She now leads the national SBA division for First Bank and SBA Complete, the largest processors of SBA loans in the country. A current member of the board of directors of the National Alliance for Grieving Children (NAGC), Stephanie is passionate about helping family businesses secure financial solutions that allow them to continue to excel at serving families while helping generations transition ownership in the most sensible and productive way.
